The marriage was solemnized in Grace Chapel, and a reception was held at the Jones’ Summer home, “The Playhouse.”

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an Empire style ivory satin gown trimmed with old Lows 14th lace. A long veil of illusion fell from a tiara of matching lace, and she carried calla lilies. Her pearls were a gift of her bridegroom.

Her matron of honor was Mrs. Jane Cheever Lyman of Brookline, and bridesmaids were Miss Shirley Elizabeth Brown of Columbia, S. C.; Miss Elizabeth Mary Parker of Parkersburg, W. Va.; Mrs. Elizabeth Vose Lockett of Welllesley and Marblehead, and Miss Alice White of Cambridge.

All the attendants wore white marquisette gowns with bishop’s sleeves. Mrs. Lyman carried Easter lilies and the bridesmaids, regal lilies. All wore white horsehair picture hats.

Best man for Mr. Taylor was Andrew McBurney of New York City. The usher corps included Captain John Clark Jones 3d of Fort Eustis, Va.; Lieutenant Theodore Haller of New York City, Ashmead Seabury Jr. of Weston and Frank Eastman of Suffern, N. Y.

Assisting the bridal couple greet their guests at the reception were Mrs. Jones, mother of the bride, wearing a navy floor-length gown and white accessories with a Eucharist lilies corsage, and Mrs. Taylor, in a gray crepe gown, black accessories and corsage of blue delphinium.

The bride is a graduate of the Winson School, Boston, and Highlands College, Roanoke, Va.; is a member of the Boston Women’s City Club and is a Magna Carta Dame. Mr. Taylor, a graduate of Yale University in 1936, attended Phillips Exeter and Brown University. He is a member of the Yale Fence Club, the Boston Yacht Club and the Corinthian Yacht Club at Marblehead.
