

* * * * *

The rage of a man at the Scollay sq. station of the L last night was beyond speech. The train was crowded, and the man's wife was hustled into the car, then the gates were slammed, and the husband was left outside. He tried to talk to the brakeman, but without being able to do more than gurgle, then tried to tell his wife where he would meet her. She was going to get out at Adams sq., but was unable to get out, and finally wound up at the North station. I wager that when the gentleman found his speech (and I hope he found his wife) there were things said about the new system that would need a press censor's work.

* * * * *

Robert M. Taylor

This man was Robert M. J. who was going to the Circus with his family

He failed to ~~step~~
"step lively"

[Undated 33; a newspaper clipping glued to a piece of paper; written on the paper:]

Robert M. Taylor – This man was Robert M. T. who was going to the Circus with his family He failed to “step lively”

[The clipping:]

The rage of a man at the Scollay sq. station of the L last night was beyond speech. The train was crowded, and the man's wife was hustled into the car, then the gates were slammed, and the husband was left outside. He tried to talk to the brakeman, but without being able to more than gurgle, then tried to tell his wife where he would meet her. She was going to get out at Adams sq., but was unable to get out, and finally wound up at North station. I wager that when the gentleman found his speech (and I hope he found his wife) there were things said about the new system that would need a press censor's work.

These collections are protected by United States and International copyright laws. Personal non-commercial use of these materials is allowed. Any other use is strictly prohibited without the express written permission of the Dennis Historical Society.